Dear Lieutenant Governor Wasinger,

I love America because it is founded on the principle that all men are created equal. As we celebrate our 250th anniversary, our history proves that there is no other country in the world that treats more people more fairly than the United States. We believe so firmly in this principle that we fought a Civil War to bring freedom and equality to all Americans.

I love America because our Constitution recognizes our rights come from God – not from government – and it protects those God-given rights.

I love America because it remains the land of opportunity. Regardless of background, any individual can succeed through perseverance and hard work.

I love America because it is the last great hope for freedom, prosperity, and opportunity in the world. Charlie Kirk once noted, “America is the only country where even those who hate it refuse to leave.” To me, this highlights a powerful truth: even our harshest critics recognize that the opportunities, safety, and freedoms found here are unmatched anywhere else on earth.

I feel honored to call this place my home, and I am committed to preserving these values for the next generation.

Sincerely,

Francesca Giardina
